Nixon Vetoes ABM Cutback

Battle Looms In Senate

WASHINGTON (WP) -President Nixon stood firm against accepting any compromise on his proposed Anti-Ballistic Missile program Friday as the ABM opponents the Senate warned him again that he would get no bill unless he gave ground.

At the White House, Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler declared that the President's position "remains as stated." And Ziegler went on to predict that the president had enough senators with him to

At the Pentagon, spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim reported that Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird also was sticking by the ABM request.

But Friedheim added that any compromising a m e n dments which didn't limit the ABM's $759.1 million authorization request for the current fiscal year only to research and development would be given careful study by the Pentagon.

In the Senate, Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen (R- Ill.) and John Tower (R-Tex.) chairman of the Senatorial Republican Campaign Committee, both predicted victory.

Dirksen, refusing to entertain any talk of compromise, even at the risk of a 51-to-49 squeak-through, declared: "If you win by one point, it's as good as 20 touchdowns.

Tower said the president's Safeguard ABM proposal "it self is a compromise" permitting no "minimum acceptable alternative." He declared it "the most limited defensive missile system that is consistent with the national

'GET A LAUGH'

But George D. Aiken of Vermont, the Senate's senior Republican, warned: "If there is no modification of compromise there probably won't be any bill. And any 51-to-49 vote would just get a laugh from the Russians.

Aiken, who had first warned the administration that it was in trouble on Thursday when he announced that he could not accept its ABM proposal as written, went on to add a new caution on Friday.

"This is not helping our prospects for next year not a bit," Aiken declared in an interview.

"The Republican prospects are not being improved at all. Hubert Humphrey because he

JAIL WITHOUT BAIL BACKED BY NIXON

MITCHELL . . . submits plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration proposed Friday that federal courts be allowed to hold potentially dangerous persons in jail without bail for up to 60 days while awaiting trial. Among those who could be held without bail would be repeat offenders charged with at least two crimes of violence, anyone who threatens witnesses or jurors, persons accused of "dangerous crimes" such as bank robbery and sale of narcotics, and narcotics addicts charged with a crime of violence.

The proposal, submitted to Congress by Attorney-General John N. Mitchell, drew fire from Senator Sam Ervin Jr. (Dem. — N.C.) who said it "smacks of a police state."

U.S. Testing Nerve Gases

By RICHARD L. LYONS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON-The army released figures Friday showing an increase in its open-air testing of nerve gases and admitting for the first time that it is conducting such tests at the Edgewood Arsenal, 15 miles northeast of Baltimore.

The declassified figures were made available to a House conservation subcommittee that has been investigating the possible dangers of open-air testing of chemical and biological warfare agents. showed that tests have been conducted at Fort McLellan, La., and Edgewood in addition to the Dugway Proving Grounds in Utah, where 6,000 sheep were killed in a testing accident in March,

Subcommittee staff members said the figures indicate an increase in the volume, scale and variety of tests during the last year.

Tests Jump From 67 to 358

The table showed 31 tests at Dugway during the year after March, 1968, but 67 tests planned there during the second quarter of 1969 and 358 tests planned at Dugway during the three-month period that began July 1.

For Edgewood, the report showed 110 tests planned during the last three months, but said many of them might have to be postponed to the three-month period that began July 1. For this three-month period 129 tests are planned at Edge-

The Edgewood tests involve quantities range ing from 50 grams of Sarin to 10 pounds of VX, the gas that killed the sheep. A total of 29 tests with VX are planned at Edgewood. Other gases to be tested there during the next three months are Soman and Tabun and EA-1356.

Many Gases Released on Ground

The report said the 47 tests planned at the Army Chemical Corps school at Ft. McLellan during the last three months involved pouring different agents in amounts of up to two gallons of mustard gas "on a suitable surface for detection and decontamination exercises."

At Dugway and Edgewood the gases were packed in land mines, artillery shells and rockets for testing. The figures show that many tests were made on the ground, but do not specify at what height others were released in the air.

Gang Clash Quelled At Resort Village

CRYSTAL BEACH, Ont. (CP)-Thirty-two persons were arrested following a wild three-hour bottle-and-stone-throwing battle early today between gangs from Buffalo, N.Y. and this summer resort community.

The battle, described by police as "a near riot" and as a "major disturbance," ranged up and down Derby Road, the main street in this community of 20,000 persons about 15 miles south of Niagara Falls.

was some speculation by ABM opponents that the White House just isn't getting the facts of life in the Senate. Some liberal Republicans have said in the past that the president has used Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew and Bryce Harlow, his assistant for Congressional affairs, his eyes and ears - and that just isn't good enough. To date, two compromise amendments have been introduced:

One, by Sens. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.) and Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.) would permit the administration's $759.1 million ABM authorization request to be used for further research and development on the feasibility of any ABM system to achieve air knockouts of enemy offensive missiles. But it would permit no onsite deployment of equipment for these missiles, or for the missiles themselves.

Another amendment, Thomas J. McIntyre (D-N.H.), would permit certain radar, computer and electronic work at the designated North Dakota and Montana sites - but no actual onsite deployment of the operational missile.

Claims on the Sea

Canadian Fisheries Minister Jack Davis contradicts the account of a Vancouver-based halibut boat skipper that he had been detained and later expelled as a trespasser from fishing grounds within the 12mile limit off Alaska, over which the United States claims jurisdiction.

The fisherman, according to advice Mr. Davis received from American authorities, was not expelled from Alaskan waters within the 12mile limit and the incident does not repudiate the arrangement by which Canadians can fish in some American-claimed waters. The detention and alleged order to move, they say, involved other considerations-matters reportedly concerned with validation of a boat's licence to fish in that area under joint Canadian-U.S. halibut regulations.

The issue may be dismissed as a misunderstanding. It is, nevertheless, the kind of misunderstanding which may be expected to recur as Canada completes its arrangements for baselines for the 12-mile limit over which it claims fisheries' jurisdiction. Canada has underscored its readiness to observe historic rights which permit Americans and other fishermen to continue fishing in waters they have used for a period of years prior to extension of the Canadian fisheries limits. At the same time, this country has made no secret of its hope to phase out those historic rights eventually.

THE EXPLANATION GIVEN BY tainties may exist in the minds of Canadian and American fishermen whose countries hitherto have followed comparable courses in dealing with intruding Japanese and Russian boats in their respective waters. Add to this the looming controversy over waters in the Canadian Arctic-and the underseas resources they cover.

> The whole situation lends point to the statement made by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in the Commons the day after the Alaska incident. Plans, said Mr. Sharp, are now being discussed for the calling of another law of the sea conference. The United States and the Soviet Union, he added, were prepared for such a conference and hold some viewpoints with which Canada does not agree.

The desirability of a conference at which agreement might be reached on different points-or disagreement brought clearly into the open should be generally recognized. The unilateralism with which various nations have been acting in respect to seaboard jurisdiction has proved provocative in different regions. Something better is required to avoid future graver trouble. And while jurisdiction is being discussed, it would also be profitable to initiate more co-operative international conservation arrangements, without which one of the world's great food sources will be irreparably harmed.

Record of Business Completed

WITH the passage this week of the official languages bill, the House of Commons has now completed its legislative work for this session. When measured against the objectives set last fall, the record is imposing. In place of the customary back-log of unfinished business, the Trudeau government can point to an almost completed agenda. The only e m b arrassment in this legislative success story is the fact that it is difficult to make a case of demonstrated need for the rules changes now being pressed on Parliament.

Following the speech from the throne last September, Mr. Trudeau tabled a list of 47 bills referred to in His Excellency's text. This was not, of course, an exhaustive agenda for the speech also forecast other work such as procedural reform, review of foreign and defence policy (which came to involve Parliament), economic measures, which led in due course to two budgets, and so

In sum, the government, young, ambitious and fresh from the people, sought approval for a very far-reaching program

Some Were Dropped

What has happened to these bills? About 36 have passed all stages. Of the remainder, some have been dropped for a variety of reasons. For example, Mr. Mackasey told the House last March the bill amending the Industrial Relations and Disputes Act would be deferred to another session. The Indian claims commission bill was postponed for reasons not involving parliament and the government has now announced a new policy. The bill dealing with educational television is still being studied in committee and so are bills relating to the Canada Corporations Act and investment companies But this is normal, Governments frequently defer or alter legislation of their own motion and in the light of more adequate information or for other considerations.

It is also normal that Parliament has dealt with some legislation not mentioned in the throne speech. For to the National Housing Act, controverance Act.

In any case statistics of this sort are not too revealing. The important point is that the government has carried its priority legislation. It set the program determined what was essential urgent and can now fairly claim to have secured the passage of practically all the great measures mentioned in the throne

The reorganization of the government has been carried out.

The language bill - a very farreaching measure, whose importance is recognized by advocates and critics alike has passed the House of Commons. The regional Development Incentives Act, a key item in the Trudeau economic program, is now law.

So are the many and diverse economic and social reforms wrapped up in the famous omnibus bill amending the Criminal Code. In the West, there has been much criticism of the inadequacies of government farm legislation. But the fact is that what the government asked for: Parliament gave. Similarly, ministers have won assent for the various items in their program on consumer legislation: securing important changes in patent and trade marks legislation and in the Food and Drugs Act: obtaining passage

Letter

In the article by Nicholas Von Hoffman, Page 5, Times, July 9, regarding the conflict between "psychological" man and "biblical" man, he seems to think that "never the twain shall meet." Here is an interpretation of the imagery of the 23rd Psalm, written by an older minister after attending a seminar on the "new theology," and published recently in the United Church Observer:

"The Ground of our Being is my psychiatrist: I shall not suffer lack of existential

He maketh me to lie down in environments of acceptance:

He leadeth my thinking into situations in which I may resolve my disabling

He provideth therapeutic support for my battered psyche. He leadeth me by the unstructured application of the agape-ethic.

Into paths of emotional maturity 'cause that's his bag. Yea, though I walk through the valley

I will not always be hung-up; for he has established me in a viable relationship with himself. His display of concern for me as a person gives my life authenticity.

He prepareth a table of assurances for me in the presence of my neurotic My self-acceptance runneth over! Surely security and creativity shall follow me all the days of my life And I will be 'en rapport' with the Beyond in the Midst-forever."

Some scientific minds seem unwilling to make the effort to understand the imagery of the Bible, but if they did, would find it a "psychological" treasure nouse. The Protestant mind demands the privilege of figuring it out for himself and though many have gone astray in their conclusions, still others enriched their lives by its mysterious

Commons to endorse very sweeping procedural reforms. The achievement may be partially overshadowed by the pre-Christma failure to secure the adoption of the controversial rule 16A and the new attempt to effect a modified closure rule through adoption of the proposed standing order 75C.

In fact, however, the changes which were accepted have already transformed the workings of Parliament. Estimates, for example, have been removed from the floor and are now dealt with in committees. The supply procedure is now almost automatic and governments cannot be starved into submission as sometimes happened in the past.

Some Advantages

Ministers have been partially freed by the roster system from daily attendance at question period although it remains arguable that the government could have achieved a better result by resisting the temptation to bring about this change by unilateral decision

Thus, by Parliamentary accounting, the first session must be accounted an impressive performance. The trouble is that success provide the wrong setting for a new venture in Parliamentary

Ideally, Mr. Macdonald should be able to show that the government has been obstructed in its legislative program and that a remedial procedure must accordingly be found. As this agrument is not available the ministerial exposition is almost bound to seem academic and hypothetical.

But the government is not without advantages. The most considerable, perhaps, is the season. It is presumably the ministerial calculation that the opposition, even it has the endurance for a protracted fight, will not easily make its procedural case before the country. One might argue that the experience with 16A demonstrated the opposite.

But this is high summer when Parliament for most people probably is at best a peripheral interest. In the absence of any clearly recognizable bread and butter issue, the opposition may be hard pressed to provoke a salutary public reaction to procedural pro- for the collective security system.

Eyes on the Asian Visit

By Dev Murarka From Moscow

THE battle for Asia is beginning all over again. The forthcoming visit of President Nixon to four Asian countries is viewed in Moscow as a counter-offensive to its project for a comprehensive Asian security system, launched by Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev at the world Communist conference last month.

The trip to Asia is also considered here as a measure of the challenge that Washington now faces from the Soviet Union. Two of the countries Mr. Nixon is visiting-India and Pakistan - afready have extensive ties with Moscow. The Philippines is edging away from total dependence upon the Americans, and Indonesia is in a delicate position of pro-Western neutrality.

It is felt here that though Mr. Nixon may warn these countries against participating in the Soviet - sponsored scheme, he may also test the ground for its viability and chances of success.

A Little Coyly

At the same time, the Soviets have started filling in—a little coyly—s o m e of the details behind their concept of a security system. They are still waiting for reactions to come in, and are likely to fill in other details as the basic idea gains ground. But two things are already

1. The scheme has aroused interest in Asia. Diplomats from many countries have inquired in Moscow about further details. This response indicates that even if these countries are uncertain about what to do, and a little suspicious about the source from which the scheme has been put forward, it answers a need. This is not necessarily because all of these countries feel threatened by Communist China or any other big power, but because they often feel menaced by their other neighbors.

2. The Russians are trying hard to discourage the idea that the plan is purely an anti-Chinese move on their part. The countries which feel threatened by China are likely to be those most afraid to join any alliance solely aimed against Peking. So the Russians are trying to provide the whole concept with a much wider aspect,

A top Soviet political commentator, Spartak Beglov, has provided some insight on the concept. He denies that the system will provide any opportunity for large-scale supplies of arms to its members. He also refutes the suggestion that it will be some sort of a military grouping led by Moscow, Instead he emphasizes its universal nature, which indicates that all the Asian countries and interested powers - including the United States — will be free to join it.

The denial that the Russians proposing to become the arsenal of the system by supplying weapons freely or in large quantities to everybody reinforces a statement from the Soviet foreign ministry dismissing as "nonsense" reports that the Soviet Union is to help Pakistan build a naval base at Kwadar, near the Iranian border, in return for facilities for the Soviet navy in the Indian Ocean.

Mutual Obligations

Beglov also indicates that the system will respect the non-alignment of participating members.

More significant is the Soviet view that membership of the system will sion against each other. This is the crux of the matter, since it will automatically bar conflicts like that between India and Pakistan in 1962.

According to Beglov, the scheme will also include provision for encouraging disarmament measures. This seems to be designed to discourage the smaller countries from arming themselves against each other or attempting to become small-scale nuclear powers.

The system's economic side will provide for extensive development of regional schemes for co-operation. The Soviets apparently consider such development to be an essential prerequisite

THE wording of the plaque must have been difficult: "Here men from the planet Earth first set foot upon the moon, July 1969 A.D." Then come the words, "We came in peace for all mankind." OTTAWA - John J. Carson. the chairman of the Public Service Commission, has said, and it has been reported as a matter of news here that there is no evidence that a person who actually wants to learn a second language cannot do so.

Mr. Carson was inclined to pooh-pooh the theory that there may be some mechanin the brain of the English - speaking Canadian which causes the mechanism automatically to shut off, on a sort of thermostat principle, as soon as it is asked to absorb any part of The Other Language.

The problem, he suggested, is not one of capacity to learn, but of willingness - and he said that it has been the experience of the Commission that candidates of a United Kingdom background have demonstrated greater language receptivity than others, say, British Columbia.

What is implied here, of course, is that English-speaking Canadians suffer from nothing so much as perverseness.

It is unfortunate that, before making this judgment and in public, Mr. Carson did not acquaint himself with the authoritative work on the subject — the study which was done between 1962 and 1965 by Dr. Werner Grauer, of

Dr. Grauer, a psychologist came to Canada on a National Research Council fellowship primarily to examine the phenomenon of the rise smut in the wheatfields of Western Canada — someone was selling dirty books to farmers from a bookmobile and it was idle observation of what he later came to call the Language that led him to his larger

Dr. Grauer was boarding at the time with the family of a farmer, who subsequently appeared in the doctor's pub lished case studies as Wilfred F. Farmer, 52. The following is from Dr.

Grauer's major work, I n e radicable Unilingualism Among Adult English - Speaking Canadians — Trick, Trait

Subject was first observed at breakfast one morning cutting out small pieces of masking tape and applying them so that they would cover on the box in front of him the

"Asked what he was doing, subject replied that the way (unidentified) were 'they' gaining the upper hand everywhere these days, there probably wasn't much hope, but that he proposed to keep his kids from being exposed to this papist propaganda as long as he could. 'If God intended us to speak two languages,' he said, 'He would have given us two tongues . . ."

Later efforts by Dr. Grauer to teach subject a few words in the other language resulted in subject chasing Dr. Grauer off the place, hurling fearful Also from Dr. Grauer's casebook:

"Miss Wilda R., 25, typist. On being handed a copy of M. Barlitz Premier Livre, Miss Feather, a moderately intelligent and quite attractive young woman, blushed furiously. Under questioning, it proved that Miss Feather associated the other language with things which she described as improper. If they weren't talking dirty," said in a later interview, once trust had been established, 'why wouldn't they say it out straight, in English?

"Patient effort produced no change in her attitude; nothing could induce her to open book. What made the case of Wilda R. the more intriguing was that it was discovered that what she was prepared not only to listen to, but to act upon, in English, was quiet remarkable. But that is another story . . .

"John P., 41, gentleman Subject said that he had studied the other language at school and had applied himself diligently and with interest. Denied that it was because of any wilfulness on his part that he had not done better, and suggested that a strong attachment to his own cultural background was to blame. 'You learn one language good, see, and maybe think it shouldn't be no trick to pick up another one, but when you try, you find it ain't, on account of that ain't your own culture, you know what I mean?"

Mr. Carson could look it up in the Parliamentary library if he wished.

and in my own way. "Don't run away with the idea that I think I'm perfect, that I'm above all fault. Not at all. It happens, though, that I have a thing about certain forms of honesty. And when he says that we all cheated at one time or another in our school experience he is, in fact, calling me a cheat. His presumption on that point is a little more than I'm prepared to take.

"Nor am I ready to swallow, holus-bolus, suggestion that 'the system' creates cheats by making the thing the cheat cheats for so important that its attainment is justified by whatever means are used. "In fact," said my friend, "I've reached the point where I'm tired of hearing 'the system' blamed for almost any offence and I'm not simple-minded enough to believe that 'the system' is infallible.

"Let me tell you a story.
"A long time ago an honest and philosophical radical told me that, in theory at least, anarchy was the highest develop ment to which mankind could aspire. But it had one incurable flaw. Anarchy, he was the elimination of law. The flaw resided in humanity. If woman and child in the world lived in a manner which gave only help, kindness affection and respect to every other man, woman and child, and if none interfered with others in a world of perfection, then laws would be unnecessary - anarchy would be sublime. But, said the honest and philosophical radical, all human beings aren't built that way. So in order to get along with others in a tolerable society, rules of conduct are prescribed. These take on the force of laws. With laws the ideal of anarchy vanishes,

"The idea made sense to me, even though I don't agree with all the laws under which we exist. Still, if we are to exist at all, some rules have to be followed and the absolute right of the individual to do as he pleases possible as that might be under the impossible perfection required for anarchy -becomes subjected to the rules.

"You can branch off from there into the discussion of politics as the art of the possible, if you want to, but that's not the point I'm making.

'What I'm saying is that society, in order to operate, sets certain regulations — and a number of them are questionable — in order living tolerable. The classical argument is reduced to the example of the caveman. When he wanted something, whether it was the best dinosaur steak or somebody else's girl friend, he could always bop the possessor of what he desired on the head and take it from him. Constant bopping made sore-heads of the dispossessed. They banded together and decided to knock the tough guy on the noggin so they could keep what they had. They call that collective security now, but it probably was the foreof the rules that became

"Not everybody used a club. Some found it less painful and more profitable to cheat a little or a lot, lie a little or a lot, swipe or steal, or resort to various forms of mayhem. It runs back to the day when man came

"I used to think, a little optimistically, that the process we call civilization was eliminating some of the rough spots in human behavior. It's difficult to retain the assumption in the light of death, destruction and inhumanity shown in the various wars that are being waged. Still, I'm not ready yet for someone I don't know to offer up a blanket confession that involves me in an admission of cheating. It's not honest in itself, that kind of all-embracing generaliza-

Global Observing

WASHINGTON (WP)-A major test in 1973 of a future global weather observation system-a method that could revolutionize weather forecasting by making predictions days in advance-was proposed here.

"We can make accurate forecasts now only two days

"We can make useful but not very good forecasts just four or five days ahead," said Dr. Jule G. Charney, chairman of a Nationaly Academy Sciences committee on global atmospheric research "But we are on the verge of advances in theory and obser-vation that could certainly enable us to forecast accurately for four of five days or longer," he said, noting three sepcific areas that need developing:

"Global observation" obser-proposed for 1973 by Charney, professor of meteorology at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and his committee. It would be part of an international Global Atmospheric Research Program (GARP) for which Charney and colleagues are now the U.S. committee. Several countries are taking part in it, under United Nations and international scientific auspices. The entire world now

The Separation of Fact From Fancy

Long Beach, as everyone knows, is Canada's largest and finest sandpile, and one of the best in the world,

Aside from that bit of information, most of what is said, written or broadcast mouth-to-mouth a b o u t this west coast recreational area, either partially inaccurate or downright wrong.

Some of the more popular half-truths: you can only get there by airplane or boat; access by car is over a gruelling gravel road, high-lighted by a stretch of white - mountain-climbing best left to goats; the road is restricted to logging trucks

A few of the facts: The only tough stretch to drive is 15 miles at the east end. It is truly not for the faint of heart or the best place to tow a 40foot mobile home across. But once negotiated, it's practically clear sailing. It is true that some deep potholes only contain a filling of oilpans and exhaust systems left there after contact with sharp rocks thrusting up from the mudpack surface. But there's no need to lose either your cool or your muffler if you travel slowly.

There are no other hazards on the 70-mile highway from Port Alberni, regardless of what the gas pump jockey in Parksville may have told you. Once past this stretch there are 25 miles of gravel road almost ready for paving. Another 10 miles is being paved and after that you are pavement right to the beach

The whole trip can be done at posted speed limits in 21/2 hours.

The most stunning views from nerve-wracking heights along the trip. Unfortunately, depending on your point of view, reconstruction will take the highway down along the shore of Sproat Lake within two years.

You can, of course, avoid the whole scene by coming in by air or water. Airlines offer scheduled or charter flights daily and a passenger ferry leaves Port Alberni Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for Uchielet during the summer

The charge that hippies are cluttering Long Beach is groundless. Now that the parks branch charges all beach dwellers $1 a night the hippies have moved farther south to Wreck Beach.

Some have also gone up an unnamed creek east of there, partly because the beach is nearly overrun with surffers who come there from as far away as California. Surfing in waves up to seven feet high, it is recommended that enthusiasts wear wetsuits or a double-ply set of penguin's underwear.

The water is cold, although it is warm enough to swim in some of the sun-warmed tidal pools, especially those at Chesterman Beach, north towards Tofino.

The communities of beerdrinking surfers and potsmoking hippies co-exist with the tourists who stray into both camps. An RCMP constable told me there is less trouble on the beaches than in

My wife and I had a totally different experience. All the long-haired boys and girls we met were helpful and polite. Two girls with long hair, beads, dresses to the ground and granny glasses offered us the opportunity to break bread with them after we gave them a ride.

The mixture of people adds interest to the view which won't spoil with age. Age hopefully will improve some of it after the early loggers left a battleground of mangled trees, snags and rotting stumps across thousands of acres of mountain and flat-

The work will be carried ou by provincial authorities and then the park will be turned over to the federal government which is sharing the cost 50-50 with the province.

Fred Ahrens, director of parks, said there will be no logging, mining, gravel pit o p erations or subdivisions allowed within the park.

Unlike Banff which has been plagued with problems over its 42-year lease policy, Long Beach has two communities nearby to service holidayers which will not be subject to national park restrictions.

The park will be developed in three stages, Mr. Ahrens said. The first stage will be at Long Beach and will include land behind the present park and part of Kennedy Lake, the largest fresh water lake on Vancouver Island.

Second stage will be development of a marine park with the inclusion of the Effingham Islands at the entrance to Barkley Sound.

Final stage will be re-creation of the 35-mile west coast trail from Bamfield to Port Renfrew. When completed the public will have access to 65 miles of coastline stretching from Cox Bay (south of Chesterman Beach) to Port Renfrew, excepting those portions pri-

Canadian Nature Film Maker Selling Series With Message

By GORDON WAINMAN

TORONTO (CP) - Dan Gibson Canadian producer of nature films, will be selling his Audubon Wildlife Theatre television series in the United States this fall along with a "Man must learn message: more about his natural environment or he's in trouble."

The Toronto-based KEG Productions Ltd. is setting up a subsidiary distributing company in Buffalo, N.Y. projected earnings of $6,-000,000 over the next five years. The name comes from the initials of Mr. Gibson and his two partners, Ralph Ellis and Jerry Kedey.

The Audubon Wildlife Theatre claimed 650,000 Canadian viewers in its first year and has since been sold in England, Germany, Switzerland, Japan and Singapore.

Another company, Dan Gibson Productions Ltd., sells na-ture films to educational tele-

The revolutionary technique of the film was that it eliminated background music and narrative and included only the natural sounds of the wilds of Algonquin Park.

Pollution, lumbering, mining and industrial waste concern Mr. Gibson, and he attempts a "soft sell" method of defining their dangers on the screen.

Filming nature since he was a teen-age camper in Algonquin Park, much of his footage is taken in the central Ontario park which he considers his second home and where he has a cottage.

USES TAPED CALLS

His keen ear differentiates bird and animal calls instantly.

Mr. Gibson often uses hunting techniques. He has filmed ducks from Ontario to Alberta to Florida from behind duck blinds and using a hunter's duck call.

To attract most bird species within camera range he uses a tape recording of the particular bird he plans to film. With a tape recorder over his shoulder, a Gibson-designed parabola microphone in his hand and his 650-millimetre super-lens camera, he heads into the bush, usually alone. "In effect, I invade a bird's territory with the call of his own species.

HOFFMAN TO STAR IN CANADIAN FILM

CALGARY (CP)-A western movie starring Dustin Hoffman and Fay Dunaway will be made in Calgary this fall.

Director Arthur Penn and 10 associates visited Alberta last weekend to choose the site for Canadian segments of Big Man, Little Man. The film is about General Custer's attacks on Indians in the American Northwest and extending across the Canadian border, Big Man, Little Man begins with Hoffman as an old man. In a flashback he recalls adventures as one of Custer's aides. The story de-romanticizes much of the legend that has grown around Custer and his last stand.

It is expected that extras for the movie's battle scenes will be recruited in Calgary.

Arthur Penn established himself artistically with the Miracle Worker, which won wide acclaim. However, it was his direction of Bonnie and Clyde that gave him popular fame.

Bonnie and Clyde was the film that made a star of Miss Dunaway. Hoffman is best known as hero of The Graduate.

BBC Cutback Plan Prompts Outcries

LONDON (AP) - The BBC has announced cost cutting plans for radio in the 1970s, including a shift in stress from live to recorded concert music and the dropping of at east three BBC orchestras.

The plans touched off an immediate outcry from the Musicians Union, which ing BBC musicians out on strike unless the Hardie Ratcliffe, general secretary of the union, called a news conference to make the strike threat and denounce the plan for throwing 300 musicians "on the scrap heap." He said it would reduce part time work for other musicians who get BBC fees totalling £250,000 (about $650,000) a year.

The BBC plans, published now for public discussion, came in a 13-page booklet that again rejected the idea of accepting advertising revenue.

The BBC is financed by 18,000,000 licence holders who pay 25 shillings

($3.25) each a year for the radios in the cars and homes. The BBC predicted that at present spending levels, and with no increase in licence fees, BBC radio will run at a deficit of £4,500,000 ($11,- 700,000) a year by 1974. It said this was why cuts were needed. Classical music programs have drawn a small audience at high cost.

There is just a dreary listing, a l m o s t text-book quality, of Che's achievements and his final failure, some smidgins of philosophy, and a few weak attempts by Ebon to probe the motivations of a subject he has not really

Despite Ebon's minute documentation of the Bolivian fiasco, he appears to miss completely, or is incapable of capturing, the human element and the process of emotional brutalization that saps the spirit of the guerrillas, driving them deeper and deeper into despair and ultimate despair disaster.

He virtually ignores Guevara's diary, the personal document last dated two days capture and death, although he devotes a chapter to the frantic bidding for the diary by the world press in June of 1968.

It is almost in spite of Ebon that any emotional charges seep through uninsulated from dramatic plight, after the and idealism are stripped away, of a group of human beings marking time

Only once in Ebon's careful recital of the abortive guerrilla uprising does the agony of the situation emerge.

It comes as part of an entry in a tattered notebook found on the body of East Germanborn Russian agent Tamara Bunke, known by the codename Tania to Guevara's men. She was killed August 31, 1967 along with seven other guerrillas during a river crossing ambush by Bolivian troops, and her death marked the beginning of the end for Che's unit.

Ebon has something that is emotional dynamite, but instead of exploding it he uses it as a period to a rather dry chapter entitled Despair in the Jungle and then goes on to more documentation.

If the student radicals are guilty of romanticizing a particularly dirty, bloody, little and abortive guerrilla war into a holy crusade, Ebon is guilty of the other extreme - compressing a tragic human experience into mere dates and statistics.

He quotes a Bolivian government official as saving Che Guevara, in death, has hurt us far more than he ever could as a guerrilla."

There should be a footnote effect that Martin Ebon, in writing, has done the same to the art of biography.

What Can Business Do About Revolt of Youth?

Asked to explain the essence of jazz, Louis Armstrong replied, "If you have to ask, you'll never know."

The same thing can be said of today's youth. But not everyone is under 30 and where it's happening." Some people have to ask.

Student demonstrations, protests, riots so overloaded the news services this last school year that some paper kept for a time a daily boxscore of campus disturbances across North America.

It appeared that higher education was going out of control, and in some places such as San Francisco State College this was in fact the

The editors of Fortune magazine decided to take a good, hard look at things, and the result is a tidy paperback volume called "Youth in

YOUTH IN TURMOIL .-By the editors of Fortune. Time-Life books, paperback.

Fortune is a business magazine. Appropriately, "Youth in Turmoil" is written to the businessman's eve.

As the first chapter, which the editors have written, nears its close, the book's purpose becomes clear: "It is important that businessmen do everything possible to make young men aware of the opportunities that await them in the corporate world." The editors feel that only business and business men turn their activities toward socially constructive projects will they be able to catch the interest and channel the idealism of today's young

"Youth in Turmoil" is an intelligent attempt to understand the changed areas of concern which many young people share. In a sense, the book projects the editors' through the subjects it discusses. Youth, it suggests, is not going to get fired up about the nine-to-five job with the big company until the big com-pany shows that it cares about something besides the big bucks, such as civil rights, urban renewal and pollution control; causes the editors evidently support. But as a document of informed opinion on business must do to re-capture the alliegance of the young idealist, "Youth in Turmoil" is an inadequate "Youth in first step.

While outlining the sympathies of those young people who want change but not a revolution, the editors have failed to show how business is capable of organizing its resources to meet human needs.

Perhaps the omission is deliberate. As long as the Vietnam War continues, as long as so many Americans continue to profit from defence and defence-related industries, any discussion of such elementary issues civil rights and pollution coatrol must seem hypocritical.

Wasting Chance

The editors of Fortune have rounded up a good look into the mind of the liberal young American. They feel that the business community is wasting it's chance to put idealism to work. American businesses would carry a much stronger image overnight if they began to refuse defence contracts. Out-

Yes. But if the now-famous 'military-industrial complex' did not exist," books like 'Youth in Turmoil" might never have been written.

A fun book for daydreamers! Writing in the tradition of Ian Fleming and John Le Carre, Mr. Leasor has created cynical hero who does all sorts of manly things.

The novel has just about everything to appeal to Walter Mittys, but cars have to be your thing to get the full flavor of the book.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - With his close-cropped hair and slight figure Claude Lelouch looks as if he might be the prop boy on a movie set. But when he starts commanding and crew, there is no doubt he is a director.

Lelouch is directing a film called Again, a Love Story. Lelouch has worked with film for most of his 37 years. At 10 he was making movies with his father's home camera. At 17 he toured the United States for his father's textile firm, making two short movies along the way.

But his real training ground was television commercials.

"I used to make 300 com mercials a year — one every day," he remarked. "It was a great way to learn how to use film; it taught me to have a

It was an auto commercial that contributed to Lelouch's great success, A Man and a Woman. His lyrical photo graph of a car in motion formed an important segment of the film

"The film, I believe, has already made $20,000,000 throughout the world, including $6,000,000 in America," he said. "I was the sole producer, and I controlled the rights everywhere except in the United States. I sold the rights here to Allied Artists so I could have the money to Lelouch followed with Live for Life, a failure in the U.S. It contained an attack on American participation in the Vietnam war. But the director emphasized that he was not anti-United States.

"It is impossible to judge a nation by one event," he said. 'You cannot judge America Vietnam any more than you could judge France by the Paris riots last May."

Again, a Love Story will take place across the United States, visiting such places as Las Vegas, Kanab, Utah and New York City. But Lelouch insisted that he is not trying to portray America.

"What I will show is the view of America by two French people - a composer Jean Paul Belmondo and a girl Annie Girardot who are working with a movie com-pany," said Lelouch. "A Frenchman cannot interpret America any more than an American can interpret France.

Only the Best in Arts For Munich '72 Olympics Maurice Bejart, director of

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

MUNICH, West Germany (NYT) — Sport may be the main objective of the Olympic Games, but the Arts will get almost equal billing at the games here in 1972. Preparations are already Munich upside down.

The centre of the town is chewed up while a subway is being built; roads are being broadened for surface traffic to Oberwiesenfeld, the district on the outskirts where the stadiums and the Olympic Village are rising, and in the offices of the organizing committee hard by the Olympic area staff people are working as if the games were starting in a few weeks.

No one has a more wide ranging blueprint to bring to than Klaus Bieringer, who is in charge of the side of Olympic Games.

Germany has two fundamental reasons for emphasis on culture. German officialdom has not forgotten that the last time their country was host to the Olympic Games, in 1936, Adolf Hitler and his Nazi Government made every effort to turn the event into a display of national might and zest for power. Today's Germany is eager to turn the games into what they were designed to be - an occasion for friendly competition and international amity.

Healthy Budget

The second reason is that a prosperous Germany has the means to carry out his plans: about $3.75 million has been set aside for the cultural program, a third from each of Federal, Bavarian and Munich Governments.

Bieringer is tall and trim enough to be an athlete in good standing and speaks English fluently because he spent several years in a prisoner-of-war camp Colorado. He explained that the cultural program would be different from the one devised Munich's own orchestras will be on hand, and the city's annual opera festival, from Aug. 1 to Sept. 9 in 1972, will coincide with the Olympics scheduled for Aug. 26 to Sept.

A Roman Catholic canon travelling around the world preaching unity of all Christian churches, believes that lay people everywhere are moving toward one church.

Canon Joseph Albert Dessain of Malines, Belgium, introduced by Bishop Remi De Roo as a "pilgrim for unity" spoke to an inter-denominational group in the Youth Room of First United Church Friday night.

"I'm surprised to see how people in so many parishes are involved in those first approaches to unity. Perhaps its just a communal prayer meeting but it's a start.'

He referred to a interdenominational parish he visited in South Africa in which the local Christian sects share the same facilities.

"We're all united through baptism, and through belief in the Holy Trinity."

Dessain outlined some of the history of the ecumenical movement beginning in the mid 1920s when Cardinal Suenens, primate of Belgium and archbishop of Malines started dialogue with Lord Halifax of the Anglican Church.

The dialogue remained on a very superficial level but the seed of unity had been sown.

In March 1966, said the Canon, a historic meeting between Pope Paul and the Archbishop of Canterbury prepared the way for a prepared preparatory commission to study the question.

voor at the Conference in Canterbury and London, the commission report called the Malta Document was officially presented.

'Let's Get Going' Decision Needed on New Pool Plans

By JIM HUME

Being a little gun-shy about spending after the people have tossed a five-year capital budget plan into the wastebasket is one thing.

Being overly timid about decisions is another kettle of fish entirely. And it was an overly-timid

Mayor Hugh Stephen Friday morning who # led off the discussion on the proposed aquatic facility to replace the Crystal Gar-

It's almost two years since the decision was made to demolish the Crystal because it was structurally unsound. At the same time (the engineer's report on the sad state of the old building was filed in October, 1967) it decided to build a suitable replacement. And those last two words are key words.

Had to Go

The 'decision of the council at that time was unanimous. Nobody wanted the Crystal to go, but go she must before she fell apart at the seams.

With that decision made. and it wasn't an easy one, the recreation committee was charged with the task of first finding a top swimming pool consultant for advice on replacement: finding a site on which the new facility could he built: hiring an architect to design the building-and to keep the budget within funds

Those tasks have all been completed, and completed

What then is the hang-up? Time. Mayor Stephen wants time to consider the proposals, time for the community to consider the proposals, time, in other words, to find out which way the public wind will blow before making a decision.

Time to do anything but make a decision. Or rather to confirm a decision made many months ago.

Ald. Robert Baird, obviously still a little sensitive over the defeat of the capital budget, wondered out loud how the swimming pool concept could be "sold" to the people.

CENTURIES OLD

300 years old.

The answer to that is twophased and relatively simple.

The first necessity is public leadership of the kind once provided by former mayor R. Wilson, a positive man who instilled the confidence to lead the city to Centennial Square, Bastion Square and other assorted projects

That leadership was lacking when the city went into its final drive to convince the people of Victoria that a fiveyear plan was essential to good government.

Indications are that it is going to be lacking, too, in the effort to convince the people that the Capital City of British Columbia, merits a little more than a concrete bath to replace the stately Crystal

The second phase of the answer should, to a council with the courage of its earlier convictions, make the first half invalid.

The woman had reported the case to the commission, and during an investigation landlord admitted that he didn't rent rooms to Negroes, adding in the same breath that he also turned away drunks and sailors.

A Halifax restaurant owner rejected a Negro applicant for a job because of his color. He said he had hired Negroes from time to time, but had had a bad experience with the last two when they ended up fighting in front of the customers. The owner said he would not hire another Negro unless he had exceptionally high references.

The commission interviewed the owner, the applicant and the employment agency which had placed him. The commission explained to the owner that he was discriminating by setting a higher standard for the hiring of Negroes.

Stop the world. Isn't this where I got off a long

I noted with interest this week the results of the recent invitational golf tournament in this city, noted that the winner was a city junior, noted that he didn't make the British Columbia Willingdon Cup golf team, and noted that somewhere I had heard all this

It is not the intention here to quarrel with the selections. because the team appears sound, as sound as it is possible to get, and young, which definitely is an attribute; if not this particular year, for the future; and fairly chosen, because the had been set, and everyone apparently understood them.

However, the part that must gripe is the same part that has always griped. In all the years that the B.C. Golf Association has been selecting Willingdon Cup teams surely, by now, a fixed method of could have selection devised.

I won't bore you with the details, but this sad tale goes back for years and one year in particular when a Victorian led all competitors in a provincial medal competition held for the express purpose of determining the cup team, the final pick. Passed over, I suppose, because he was caught putting left-handed on

But really the case in point in the Amateur, and the B.C. now concerns as fine a young player as there has been in the city for some time. Dave were putting. Mick of Gorge Vale won the weekend invitational here by one shot but his overall total was not good enough for him to qualify to the select team. On that score, Mick has his regrets, naturally, but he wants no fuss made on his behalf, "The rules were laid down," he said, "everyone knew them, and I knew I needed a couple of 65s to stand a chance. What beat me was a poor showing in the Last year, for example, Mick, then 17 years of age, was only slightly less than list honors in the amateur, key tournament of all the qualifying rounds. But the BCGA ruled in its wisdom that really there was no room at the top for a 17year-old, even though he had met all the conditions for membership. (Mick later made the B.C. junior team which won the Canadian team

This year, another 17-year old, Doug Roxburgh, from Vancouver, also did well in the Amateur, so well that he won it. And he is on the team! And he rightly deserves to be, as B.C. champion, but then again he is only 17.

And so Mick is the unwilling victim of controversy. The answer of course is that the BCGA should set up one standard, let everyone, including Joe Fan, know in advance what it is, and then stick with

As for the invitational, in retrospect, what did it prove, except that Mick was the best on those days. Our own Ernie Fedoruk likely spelled it out best:

New York Mets and Chicago Cubs, fighting for the lead in the National League Eastern Division, were both stunned Friday by losses to teams far out of contention.

Petes Pack Power

Peterborough Lakers will be in Memorial Arena next Wednesday night and it appears probably that Victoria Shamrocks will find the Eastern Professional Lacrosse Association club somewhat tougher this year.

The Petes lost four straight games in their swing through Western Association cities last summer, although they were outscored by only five goals in the four tussles. This time they are bringing an impressive record of power with them.

Lakers, who left Friday night for a four-game swing through Coquitlam, Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster, are leading the EPLA by 12 points.

The western games will be exhibitions, although they will count in the standings for the western clubs.

The Lakers have a 16-7 record this season, the only team in the East to show a winning margin. The secondplace team, Toronto Maple Leafs, are 10-11. * * *

Of the seven games Peterborough has lost, two were in overtime and the other five vere by one goal each. Peterborough has dominated the four-team league - the other clubs are St. Catharines and Kitchener - all season. Peterborough has last year's scoring champ in John Davis and he's first in the league again so far this year with 141 points on 66 goals and 75 assists.

Davis has a 28-point advantage over Jim Paterson, secand in the scoring. Team captain Cy Coombes has 65 goals and 30 assists for 95 points and fourth place in the standings. Other Lakers in the top 10 are Joey Todd, Jim Grady and Larry Ferguson.

SEABROOK, Tex. (UPI) The day before scheduled Apollo 11 splashdown is the first anniversary of an event crucial in the life of Lt. Col. Michael Collins, USAF, a martini-fancying, practicaljoking, former army brat who likes German Shepherd dogs and hybrid roses almost as much as he does fishing and handball.

On July 23, 1968, he underwent an operation for removal of a bone spur in his spine. It was unknown what the surgery might do to his career as a moon-questing astronaut. What it did do immediately was scrub him from the crew of the first moon voyage last

For three months afterwards, he wore a high jury-collar—the surgery was on a neck vertebra—and traipsed the Manned Spacecraft Centre corridors turning his whole body instead of his head. On final recovery, he threw himself into making up time. He

Beautiful Person

Collins was born in Rome, Itally, and can claim no hometown because of the travels of his late father, Maj. James L. Collins. His uncle is the renowned Gen. J. Lawton Collins, former U.S. Army Chief of Staff. His other, Virginia, of Washington, D.C., is a frequent visitor Mike's white brick, contemporary home.

likes a martini-maybe three or four. His wife is not only beautiful, she's a beautiful person. She likes martinis too.

"Mike is a bright, bright boy without being oppressively so. His repartee as capsule communicator on Apollo 8 was really brilliant. He's one of the great people. He's the best handball player. He held the championship at esting things, you know." Shepard unsteamed, another victim of the Collins

Collins makes a wide-eved. palms-up, shrugging gesture to emphasize a point when he's conversing. He has a mobile face and shows a sort of wry humor coupled with an engaging grin that deepens his

It was when the handball champ's limbs began to lose sensitivity last spring and he started stumbling that doctors realized something was growing into his spinal cord. The operation succeeded. Mike went back to the training program, including trampo-

One day somebody missed the trampoline and broke a vertebra. Alan Shepard, then chief of the Astronaut office, said that's all - no more using the trampoline. Next day, Mike went to the hospital and got a leg cast, a half one that showed only in front, and went to Shepard.

"Well, Al," he began, "it's about that physical training

"Oh, my God, you didn't!" groaned Shepard. "Oh no, not two in two days." Mike pulled the cast off, perusing it and

In an interview with UPT he was asked what worried him most about the upcoming

"Well, I guess man's greatest fear is the fear of the unknown," he said, "and I think that's true about this flight. My greatest fear is that there's some detail that has been left uncovered, that I have failed to learn how to do something properly. Some situation may arise which I'll not be able to give the proper response to.

"If I knew what it was, I'd run out and study it and it wouldn't exist anymore, you see. All chains have some weak link in them and when you start pulling on a chain you don't know which one it is. You just have to wait and

How will he feel about acclaim after the flight?

"I've really enjoyed this program immensely. The job is the most fascinating in the world. On the other hand, I say in all candor that I appreciate remaining anonymous, and I'll do the best I can to keep that going. I like to live a normal, private life, and my intent is to take whatever action is necessary to insure that I can continue to do that ... I truly enjoy my family. This is the Victoria Fair production of Shakespeare's Hamlet which premiered to a large audience in McPherson Playhouse Friday night.

As an augury of what could become an established part of Victoria summer seasons, it is auspicious. magnificent From the broodingly Gothic, eminently actable set by Robert Cothran to the close ensemble performance of the company, there is much to admire.

BALANCED

Directors Ralph Allen and Wandalie Henshaw, in the brief span of six weeks, have created the balanced and cohesive ensemble.

They have given us through medium a tragedy of us to any extent emotionally, intriguing but which is intriguing through wits often freshapproach and lively invention and which has a strong sense of progression that brews its own excitement.

SKILFUL CUTS

Cuts in the play - it would otherwise run just under four hours, this version runs a little less than three - have been made skilfully. Transineatly managed that they flow one into another with perfect smoothness.

The production is fastpaced. Sometimes too fast, when speech clarity is sacrificed to the urgent tempo. This is a fault however, that almost never mars the major - Hamlet, Claudieus, Gertrude, Polonius, Laertes and Ophelia.

Christopher Newton, Festival company and now artistic director of Theatre Calgary, is a youthful Hamlet.

A young intellectual. Sensitive, morbid, given by every rule of his nature to ondering action, not taking Shakespeare's female characters is Ophelia.

The voung idealistic closely sheltered daughter of Polonius must appear ethereal, totally unworldly, simple though not moronic if madness believable.

Harriet Allen convinces us that she is a capable acress in the mad scene but it has to be accepted without the rationale that goes before because she is both too vivid and too mature a personality convey Ophelia in the early

INDISTINCT

Carl Hare's Horatio I found indistinct, both in character and speech.

Splendid crowd effects and sword fight that would be difficult to excel are strong points of the production. The duel to the death between Hamlet and Laertes is brilliantly staged and given an electrifying realism by Newton and Munro.

Handling of the ghost scenes is original and effective and the play is well served in other details of mounting - costumes, lighting and music Specially made furniture and properties also add to the effective mise en scene - but why was that one false note allowed to creep in when Ophelia ripped glossy, colorprinted leaves from a modern

These Patients Are Under the Water

Victoria's newest hospital doesn't have any beds and much of its ward space is under water.

The hospital's "administrator" is Bob Wright and the patients are all drawn from Sealand, the underseas attraction at the Oak Bay Marina Wright decided to get into Even before the hospital was opened its staff did rounds each morning. Primarily, this took the form of a pill parade, with every animal and bird receiving the daily dosage cannily hidden in their first fish.

Chris Whiting says his patients are just as stubborn about pill-taking as children.

Chilled Onion-Potato Soup Could Be a Family Favorite

The adventurous onion is a great cooking standby. En-joyed fresh or cooked, onion occasions are constant, delighting loyalists who cry for the great spirit of one of the vegetable world's best sellers.

Orions were once used to flavor tea. French explorers in 1680 found wild onions growing along Lake Michigan where Chippewa Indians coined a name for them that led to "Chicago."

Strictly for eating, onions come in several colors: white, yellow, red and green. Store this vegetable in a cool, dry place. With a smart, affably sharp taste and vitamin C, these vegetables go well with meat, fish and potatoes, not to mention sandwiches, soups and salads. The extravagant

BRIDGMAN

DEAR ABBY: Our son just came home from Viet Nam announced his engage ment to a girl he went with he went away. She from high society

Her mother asked me for a list of people on our side we wanted invited to the wedding. My problem is we have a lot of relatives we never see except at weddings and funerals and some of them wouldn't fit in very well with such high-class folks. Also, this is going to be a dress-up type church wedding, and I hate to put some of them on the spot to spend all that money getting dressed up just for that one day.

Is there some way I can invite those who can afford it and will fit in, and leave the others out? I hate to hurt any feelings. San Antonio

DEAR SAN: Invite them all, and those who want to come will find a way to cut the mustard. Everyone has some relatives who won't fit in, But don't worry, there will be plenty on the other side who won't fit in either, and they'll fit nicely with your misfits.

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old and I am ashamed of my mother. She tells the biggest lies, and she gossips a lot on the telephone. She will talk to one lady and pretend to be her best friend, when she is really her worst enemy. How can a person be so two-faced and evil and then tell me if I tell a lie God will punish me? Charlotte, N.C.

DEAR CHARLOTTE: Do as your mother says, not as she does, Honey. Perhaps your mother will read this and realize that while example is not the only teacher, it is one of the most powerful.

DEAR ABBY: I have been asked to be a bridesmaid and am very excited about it, but I am also worried. You see, I want very much for my boyfriend to be invited to this wedding, and so far my girlfriend (the bride) hasn't said anthing about it.

The invitations haven't gone out as yet so I don't know whether she plans to invite my boyfriend or not, but I am praying she is.

Is there some subtle way I can find out? And if she isn't planning on having my boy-friend, how can I get him invited without seeming bold?

DEAR BRIDESMAID: bride asks her closest friends to be her bridesmaids, and obviously you are one of hers, so come right out and tell her that you hope she doesn't overlook your friend.

cheery optimism with which Kenojuak seems to face life. She says: "In the beginning the world was black and only the raven lived. Then came the owl and with him light, and things moved and men walked upright."

Alongside the owl, the cou ple has done symbolic interpretations of the sun, accompanied by scenes of northern daily life—the polar bear, igloo and dog sled.

Eight More Weeks and Two More Days

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

I met a friend the other day at the cereal counter at the grocery. Our children were discussing which useless plastic prize came with which cereal. They were arguing as if it mattered.

'Seven more weeks," my friend muttered. "I can't 'Does it sound any better to

What, one wonders, is so hilarious about tiddiy winks? # Knowing Tourists Beat Path To London's Beauchamp Place

By EUNICE FRIED

Not all fashion roads in London lead to the mod boutiques of King's Road and Carnaby Street. Some of the most knowing tourists this summer and fall will be beating a path to Beauchamp

This elegant little street is just one block long, sand-wiched between the Brompton Road and Walton Street, in the Knightsbridge area of London. Thirty-one houses, like so many old English doll houses, line each side of Beauchamp Place. Tiny, quaint and uncluttered, the street yet manages to house nearly 200 businesses.

Not a single square inch is wasted. Restaurants-some of the best in London-are squeezed into miniscule basements. Real estate agents, couture salons and public relations firms share narrow upper floors. Between, on the street floors, whose early 19th-century bay windows are filled with tempting displays, are the shops and

There are 25 fashion boutiques and dressmakers, four furriers, four shoe salons and 10 antique dealers. Most of the fashion shops have their own designers, but they range from the costly formal gowns of Carl Scroder to the hand-made, hand-fitted shirts of the Deborah Clare, which creates for men but often has just as many female customers

At Gerda Couture, the designs are inspired by the medieval period, but prices begin as low as $35. Caroline Charles designs for the fabrics which you bring her, starting at about $60.

Advice Given on Pressing Problem

The following letter was received from a reader in Montreal. "I always kint my husband's pullovers sleeveless, as he wears suspenders. He likes my models, but after I have pressed them, they seem less attractive. I always press them on a towel and wonder if you have a better way? How about pressing the seams only? Of course I have always maintained that the pressing and finishing are the most important part. I've seen pressing completely flat as though a steam-roller had run over it. A towel is a very good thing to use to press the pieces of the knitting on. Make sure you have several thicknesses, so it is a nice soft pad. Pin the pieces out to the measurements, and to do a good job, you will have to pin the edge about every half inch, sticking the pin into the thickness of the towel. Cover with a damp cloth, something like linen or broadcloth, something that has a

Last September 23, Bishiop Shannon wrote to Pope Paul that "this rigid teaching (in the Encyclical) is simply impossible of observance by many faithful and generous spouses. In seeking to counsel such persons I have found myself resorting to all sorts of casuistry and devious kinds of rationalizations in the hope that I might keep faith with Your Holiness and with the people of God who seek my help . . . I am ashamed of the advice I have given some of these good people, ashamed because it has been bad been bad theology, bad psychology, and because it has not been an honest reflection of my own inner convictions."

Then, on Nov. 23, one week after his fellow Catholic bishops had supported the controversial encyclical, Bishop Shannon submitted his resignation as auxiliary hishon of the Archdiocese of St. Paul Minneapolis, and as pastor of St. Helena's Church.

Both of these actions were kept a carefully guarded secret — despite Bishop Shannon's own statement on May 7, 1967: "Freedom suffers the moment man's inherent right to information begins to be curtailed ... public discussion is a necessary condition of a free society and freedom of expression is a necessary c nditi n of adequate public discussion."

Bishop Shannon went on in this letter to disclose that he had twice been summoned to Washington, D.C., by the Pope's Apostolic Delegate Archbishop Luigi Raimondi and that he had declined the Archbishop's offer of a num-ber of overseas assignments "without pastoral duties." Moreover, he admitted that as part of this attempt to get him out of the U.S., Archbishop Binz "assured me that the Archdiocese of St. Paul-Minneapolis would be financially responsible for me if I should accept one of options offered me by the apostolic delegate."

Reaction to this disclosure has been intense. St. Paul attorney Russell Sudeith, president of the Association of Christians for Church Renewal, commented: "We are sickened by the Catholic hierarchy — from Archbishop Luigi Raimondi to our own chancery officials ... the denials by Monsignor Berntson of Bishop Shannon's resignation were simply false. Such public falsehoods show a shocking disregard for the man and for the truth. As Catholic laymen we ask whether this is a Christian response from the supposed leaders of the Christian community.

The Catholic laymen who edit the National Catholic Reporter were somewhat more subtle - though no less devastating in their reaction. First they suggested that Monsignor Berntson might be hard of hearing — among

DEAR DR. MILLER: Blab our Siamese, has alway been a mean cat. Loving enough around us but terribly mean to birds; she kills and eats them whenever she has a chance. I've tried everything l can think of to break her of this bird-killing habit, but nothing has done a bit of good. I even borrowed an owl and it scared the stuffing out of her for awhile, but she still keeps on finding and killing small birds.

I think, finally, we may have the answer. Tinker, a cat a year older, belongs to friends who have to give her Tinker is the ideal cat, sweet, loving, and she simply ignores birds, except for an occasional glance, when she is outside. These friends had a canary and Tinker never once even made a pass at it. If we took Tinker, don't you think she could eventually teach Blab to forget this stupid hunting and leave birds alone? - N.B.

DEAR N.B.: Tinker may be Blab to be impressed. As far as teaching is concerned, if any is done, it's more likely to be the other way around. Odds are that instead of having one bird-killing cat, you would eventually have two. It's far easier to teach a passive cat to be an activist, then the other way around.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My horse, Tiny Tim, is very neat. He has one section of his pasture that he uses for his toilet. The grass there is tall and untouched. Other parts of the pasture are very short where he has cropped the grass down by eating it. Is my horse just unusually neat or is this common for a horse to act this way? - D.S.

DEAR D.S.: "Housebroken" horses are most commonly found among thoroughbreds. But others may be neat, too.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Over the past years, I have had a a year older, but don't expect darhsie and cocker. They both had trouble with slipped discs. Now my husband wants to try again, this time with a golden retiever. Before we do, I wanted to ask, could this dog get a slipped disc too? — N.G. DEAR N. G.: Possibly, but not probably. Any dog with a disc-and all have them-can have disc problems. However, these spinal disc problems in large breed dogs are comparatively rare.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My brother and I each bought a turtle. They had their shells painted and we heard this was bad for them. So my brother took the paint off his turtle with turpentine. It worked, the paint came off. But his turtle died. Now I want to know what I can use to take the paint off by turtle that will work but won't kill him.

DEAR G.B.: Because most paint solvents would be toxic to your turtle, the safest bet is to chip the paint off, very carefully, a little at a time.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We're just getting a young puppy and want to get started right. What is the most important thing to teach him? - L.G. DEAR L.G.: First, he needs to know his name. Secondly, teach him what "No" means. Teaching methods must be adapted to the pup's age and ability to comprehend com-mands. In the past, the tendency has been to underestimate a puppy's ability to learn. But even though a very young puppy is capable of learning, it is important not to try to force him too fast. No matter what his age, it's important to be consistent in training methods. The word "no" should mean just that— it should mean that he should immediately desist from whatever he has been doing. This should, eventually, be an inflexible command—without degree. It should mean stop, chewing, jumping up, or whatever, not eventually, but immediately. The command, once properly learned, becomes an inflexible pattern of behavior in the dog so he cannot continue to do something once the command has been given.

(During training, and after, it is appropriate to praise him for promptly obeying the command, after he has done so.) Of course, a puppy's world must be more than a series of "no, no's," but consistent early training makes life easier for you and less confusing for your canine companion.

wanting a reasonable amount of time each day for herself, and it'll be good for the children too, teaching them to respect their mother's special time and interests.

Without money to afford a live-in maid or to pack the kids off to camp, finding this time is hard-but it can be done. A mother first has to dept.

rather complain "the kids drove me crazy all day; I had time to myself"-or whether she wants to remedy the problem. If she is ready to do something, all it takes is willpower and some simple advance planning that will pay off in saved time and

If your child has to call you to get a glass of water or open his bedroom door, then you're both suffering and far too dependent on one another. Independence is both a state of mind and the actual resources to do something yourself. A stool by the sink, a stack of paper cups, a hook placed lower down on the door, will save many minutes, maybe even an hour a day.

NEED TO BE ALONE

Try to make sure that your child has something he enjoys doing when you say "I want to be alone." The usual time a young mother has to herself is her baby's nap time, and many's the mother who naps, too. But when there are older children, pre-schoolers especially, who refuse to nap and can't sit down with a good book, a mother needs to come up with something for them to do. This might be an arts and crafts box, filled with paper, crayons, string, gluesafe things a child can use alone. It might include a pack of old picture magazines and a round-edged scissors.

Remember, however, that almost anything can be used dangerously. So explain first to your child how and where these things are to be used. And to be safer yet, put a gate up at the kitchen and bathroom, two of your home's most treacherous places.

want to be alone, it's not because you don't love your figure out whether she'd children. It's just that everybody needs some time alone: As you insist on this project and carry it out, your children, who may at first object, will get used to it and may even come to enjoy it. But even with the best of planning, not every day will go well—and this is to be ex-

LIMIT TV

Even with older children, you may want to set aside time each day for everyone to do his own thing quietly. Let children take turns being the phone and door answerer for that time. Watch, however. that you don't get caught using the TV indiscriminately as a catch-all babysitter. When you need it, though, it can be a godsend if definite daily limits for summer viewing are set up. Arrange with neighbors a kind of exchange system with the kids, maybe for read-aloud sessions or sprinkler session. This could get to be a regular thing so that every mother could count on a certain time alone each week.

Encourage local teen-agers to set up play groups in their backyards. They'll have jobs, the kids will have fun, and you'll have time to yourself.

And don't waste that precious time while the kids are gone doing things you would have done anyway. Do the thing you wouldn't ordinarily do: take a nap or a bubble bath, go out for lunch, read a good book. And share with your children what you did on your time off. They'll enjoy hearing about it, just as you enjoy hearing what they EDMONTON (CP) - Children from underprivileged families are learning about areas of life they never would have seen otherwise through the efforts of a group of Ed-monton university and high school students.

From a small beginning two years ago, the student group has evolved into an incorporated society assisted by a small government grant.

The Youth Involvement Program of Edmonton is the brain child of Bryan Watt, 22, who graduated from the University of Alberta this spring with his BA. A former member of the Alberta Service Corps, he has been appointed full-time paid director of the program with an office in the downtown area.

"It all started in the summer of 1967 when my girl friend and I were introduced to a very large family who were receiving social assistance," he says.

Working with this family taking the children swim-ming, picnicking, on field trips to libraries, play-museums and art galleriesled to other university stude nts becoming interested. Thirty were involved by the end of the year.

Last year there were 75 volunteers and the program now is bringing in Grade 12 students from city high schools.

HELP COMMUNICATION

"We've found that we can help the children with school work and we have also found that we can encourage better communication between par-ents and children, Mr. Watt

Barbara Campbell, 19, a university science student, is program treasurer, and Rose-Chrepanik, 21, an education student, is secretary. The program is being placed on an organized basis under a seven-member board made up of four students and three representatives from provincial government depart-

Three of the students will be selected to represent a high school, the University of Alberta and the Northern Alberta

The object now is to recruit between 200 and 300 young volunteers to help or encourage about 1,000 children from inderprivileged families to do better at school, complete their education and become self-supporting. Mr. Watt says priority will be given to children of families on social assistance, one-parent families, im migrant families and families in which the parents are mentally or physically handicapped. "Some of these children have never seen the other side of town and we hope to broaden their experience," he "We've also found that most of them don't take part in community activities and that, for some of the children, the only friends they have are their brothers and sisters." PLAN FALL SESSIONS

During the summer the board will formulate programs and plan training ses-sions, to be held in early September and January, for the high school volunteers. These orientation sessions will give our volunteers an opportunity to learn what type of problems and situations they are most likely to encounter before they are matched with families and children." Social workers are being advised of the program and get the permission of parents to allow visits by the young volunteers. "We know there is a need in this area because teachers and social workers who have a caseload of perhaps 200 families just haven't the time to spend.

What do the volunteers themselves get out of the program?

"They visit the families once, sometimes twice a week, and it lets them see and experience what it is like to be less fortunate than they are-mainly it provides them with meaningful involvement," Mr. Watt says,

Africa and 700 miles southwest of Ascension Island is the British crown colony of St. Helena. The Tristan da Cunha group and Ascension are dependencies of this 47-square mile - in - area island. St. Helena's capital is James-

St. Helena Island was dis covered on May 21, 1502, by Joan da Nova, a Portuguese navigator. He named it after this saint who is shown on the 1934. On May 5, 1959, St. Helena issued a set commemorating the 300th anniversary of the founding by John Dutton of their first permanent settlement. The 3d value features the arms of the British East Indian Company which appropriated the island in 1651. Great Britain in 1834 gained complete control of St. Helena, and the interesting 1934 definitives mark the centenary of this event.

* * * After the "Great Fire" in London (Sept. 1666), a number of Londoners moved to St. Helena. The tercentennary of their arrival is observed by St. Helena's four pictorials issued Sept. 4, 1967. The 1d denomination portrays a part of London enveloped in the flames which destroyed thousands of buildings.

The former emperor of the French, Napoleon Bonaparte (1769-1821), was exiled on St. Helena Island from Oct. 17, 1815, to his death on May 5, 1821. Sir Hudson Lowe (1769-1844) was Napoleon's custodian and governor of St. Helena from 1815 to 1821. A likeness of Lowe appears on two of the St. Helena stamps (issued last Sept. 4) which mark the 150th anniversary of the abolition of slavery in St. Helena.

One of St. Helena's main sources of income is flax. Four of their 1953 definitives are devoted to this plant. The £1 value shows Napoleon's residence, Longwood House, which is 31/2 miles from Jamestown.

On Jan. 3, 1956, St. Helena placed on sale three adhesives a portrait of Queen Elizabeth II and their first postage stamp (issued 1856). The latest St. Helena defini tive set, released last Nov. 4, gives a good picture of that

Mass Grave Offers Riddle

Skeletons of 50 tall men have been found here in a common grave believed to date to Roman times. They are described as having been more than six feet seven inches tall.

State archeologists have been summoned to determine whether the men might have been members of a Roman legion of giants, a corps or honor guard specially selected for height and physical fit-

The mass grave was found in this coastal city 60 miles south of Rome during excavation for the foundation of a factory.

Dr. Luigi Cavallucci, one of first archeologists examine the skeletons, found no ready answer to the puzzle. No skeletons other than those of the 50 tall men were found in the grave.

Windsor Offers Taste of History

By JOHN H. FENTON

WINDSOR, ENGLAND (NYT) — The visitor to Britain in search of a Camelot might find some useful clues in a Thameside town like Windsor, complete with a roval castle.

Furthermore having fulfilled all the "don't miss" obligations - the Changing of the St. Paul's, West-Guard. minster Abbey and perhaps Simpson's, the restaurant on the Strand - there is some thing to be said for a few days of rustication.

This is not to denigrate Samuel Johnson's 18th-century observation that "when a mar tires of London, he tires of Far from it. London is life. only 23 miles east of Windsor, and there is half-hourly electric train service.

It is also possible to go to London by double-decker And when time is not short, there are cruiseboats. although this involves a change at Hampton Court, the site of a royal palace.

Facing the last week of a third visit to Britain, we two Yankee grandparents picked up a rental car at London and settled in at Windsor's old House Hotel.

FINE INN

The hotel, designed and lived in by Sir Christopher Wren in 1676, is one of many fine old inns in the Thames Valley; from the front door, you can look up at the chalk outcrop where William the Conqueror began erecting a stronghold some years after the Battle of Hastings in 1066.

Although subjected to extensive alterations in the early 19th century, Windsor Castle still dominated the skyline for miles around. The castle is complemented by the 15th-century St. George's Chapel, situated in the lower part of the grounds. Taken together, the chapel and castle give the visitor from overseas short, easy tour of much that is English.

Queen Victoria, in whose reign Windsor acquired its importance as a home of the British monarchy, is memorialized in a larger-thanlife-size statue at the foot of the short street leading to the entrance of the castle grounds. The figure, holding an orb and scepter, looks

The Changing of the Guard ceremony at 6 p.m. also is open to the public, although it is, except on state occasions, a simplified version of the one at Buckingham Palace.

Windsor, in the County of Berkshire, is more than the stle and chapel. It is a busy shopping center for the countryside and girls in miniskirts contrast with the young men from nearby Eton College who, clad in their striped trousers, white bow ties and tails, occasionally come over to Windsor to shop. The twain do not mingle, at least on the streets of Windsor.

The town's attractions include several good restaur-ants along High Street, attractive pubs and, of course, the Thames. Cruises, extended and brief, are available and in a pretty park near the boat concessions are a public putting green and a bowling

The demand from home gardeners for vegetable seeds in mid-July is sufficient for some firms to cater to these

Should the weekend of mid-July be hot and dry, we a few practices, learned from mination difficulties.

First, it is a good plan to completely rotted manure before starting to sow the seed. If the supply is limited, put all that is available into the seed drills, sow the seed, and cover with more compost put through a wire screen.

This humus holds moisture like a sponge, ready for seeds or seedlings to draw on as needed, and it is the key to success.

Fertilizers are rarely needed, there being enough left in the soil from spring sowings.

Temporary shading of the seed drills may be needed some years. For this a piece of shiplap set on edge on the sunny side, leaning over the drill and supported on short pieces of stick, will provide welcome shade during the hottest part of the day.

Incidentally, if soil has to be prepared from scratch, sow ngs may still be made until early August.

If all this sounds improb ably, impossible, or even (in modern terms) fantastic, try a fall vegetable garden and prove to yourself it can be r e a sonable, possible, and more to the point, enjoyable and profitable.

Nixon Vetoes ABM Cutback

Battle Looms In Senate

WASHINGTON (WP) President Nixon stood firm against accepting any compromise on his proposed Anti - Ballistic Missile program Friday as the ABM opponents in the Senate warned him again that he would get no bill unless he gave ground.

At the White House, Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler declared that the President's position "remains as stated." And Ziegler went on to predict that the president had enough senators with him to

At the Pentagon, spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim reported that Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird also was sticking by the ABM request.

CAREFUL STUDY

But Friedheim added that any compromising a mend-ments which didn't limit the ABM's $759.1 million authorization request for the current fiscal year only to research and development would be given careful study.

In the Senate, Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen (R- Ill.) and John Tower (R—Tex.) chairman of the Senatorial Republican Campaign Committee, both predicted victory.

Dirksen, refusing to entertain any talk of compromise, even at the risk of a 51-to-49 squeak-through, declared: "If you win by one point, it's as good as 20 touchdowns."

Tower said the president's Safeguard ABM proposal "itself is a compromise" permit-ting no "minimum acceptable alternative." He declared it 'the most limited defensive missile system that is condefence of this country.

Aiken, who had first warned the administration that it was in trouble on Thrusday when he announced that he could not accept its ABM proposal as written, went on to add a new caution on Friday.

JAIL WITHOUT BAIL BACKED BY NIXON

MITCHELL . . . submits plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration proposed Friday that federal courts be allowed to hold potentially dangerous persons in jail without bail for up to 60 days

while awaiting trial. Among those who could be held without bail would be repeat offenders charged with least two crimes lence, anyone who threatens witnesses or jurors, persons accused of "dangerous crimes" such as bank robbery and sale of narcotics, and narcotics addicts charged with a crime of violence.

The proposal, submitted to Congress by Attorney-General John N. Mitchell, drew fire from Senator Sam Ervin Jr. (Dem. - N.C.) who said it "smacks of a police state."

U.S. Testing Nerve Gases

By RICHARD L. LYONS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON-The army released figures Friday showing an increase in its open-air testing of nerve gases and admitting for the first time that it is conducting such tests at the Edgewood Arsenal, 15 miles northeast of Baltimore.

The declassified figures were made available to a House conservation subcommittee that has been investigating the possible dangers of open-air testing of chemical and biological warfare agents. They showed that tests have been conducted at Fort McLellan, La., and Edgewood in addition to the Dugway Proving Grounds in Utah, where 6,000 sheep were killed in a testing accident in March,

Subcommittee staff members said the figures indicate an increase in the volume, scale and variety of tests during the last year.

Tests Jump From 67 to 358

The table showed 31 tests at Dugway during the year after March, 1968, but 67 tests planned there during the second quarter of 1969 and 358 tests planned at Dugway during the three-month period that began July 1.

For Edgewood, the report showed 110 tests planned during the last three months, but said many of them might have to be postponed to the three-month period that began July 1. For this three-month period 129 tests are planned at Edge-

The Edgewood tests involve quantities ranging from 50 grams of Sarin to 10 pounds of VX, the gas that killed the sheep. A total of 29 tests with VX are planned at Edgewood. Other gases to be tested there during the next three months are Soman and Tabun and EA-1356.

Many Gases Released on Ground

The report said the 47 tests planned at the Army Chemical Corps school at Ft. McLellan during the last three months involved pouring different agents in amounts of up to two gallons of mustard gas "on a suitable surface for detection and decontamination exercises."

At Dugway and Edgewood the gases were packed in land mines, artillery shells and rockets for testing. The figures show that many tests were made on the ground, but do not specify at what height others were released in the air.

SEABROOK, Tex. (UPI) -The day before scheduled Apollo 11 splashdown is the first anniversary of an event crucial in the life of Lt. Col. Michael Collins, USAF, martini-fancying, practicaljoking, former army brat who likes German Shepherd dogs and hybrid roses almost as much as he does fishing and handball.

On July 23, 1968, he under went an operation for removal of a bone spur in his spine. It was unknown what the surgery might do to his career as a moon-questing astronaut. What it did do immediately was scrub him from the crew of the first moon voyage last

For three months afterwards, he wore a high jurycollar-the surgery was on a neck vertebra-and traipsed the Manned Spacecraft Centre corridors turning his whole body instead of his head. On final recovery, he threw him-self into making up time. He

The wags are saying Michael Collins is like the sailor who stayed on the Santa Maria while man's first steps on the moon July 21, Collins will pilot the command ship alone, 60 miles above

While Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin take

Collins makes a wide-eyed, palms-up, shrugging gesture to emphasize a point when he's conversing. He has a mobile face and shows a sort of wry humor coupled with an engaging grin that deepens his slight dimples.

trouble finding a best man the first time, and the ceremony had not been pretentious - so he turned it on big in 1967.

One of the sights of the Collins neighborhood is Mike training and playing with his German Shepherd, Dubhe, in the front yard—teaching him, and then letting him chase the circled water from a garden

An earlier Shepherd was killed by an automobile, and Mike went right out and bought another. When the Collins family visited him in Florida during training before the Apollo 11 launch, a neighbor kept the kids' white rabbit, Snowball, but Mike had to put Dubhe in a kennel.

"Pat told us when she got back that having Dubhe in a kennel was about to worry Mike to death," the friend said. "They're not a pretentious family. She's got a silver station wagon; Mike's got a little tan Volkswagen. Pat is conservative. She'll turn down invitations with the other astro wives just to be a homebody-be a good mother.

"Mike really likes people, wants to meet people, cially those recognized for their talent. If I have occasion to have any big executives from my company in, Mike will be right over."

Two Guppies

The Collins' oldest Kathleen, 10, a blonde who was known as Kathy during the Gemini 10 flight, tells you briskly: "I'm Kate now." She says that besides the rabbit Snowball, she and Ann. 7, and Michael, 6, have two guppies and one goldfish.

Mike's mother says he was raised an Episcopalian, but he helps Pat dress up the children like what one observer calls "princesses and prince" on Sundays and they all go to Pat's Catholic church.

They go out to dinner as a family occasionally, 'Mike's Rendezvous," a place for good seafood and steaks At home, Mike spends a lot of time fussing with his rose garden but calls his lawn "the worst-looking around here."

"I'm sure that Pat has a lot of apprehension about the flight, but she doesn't show it," a friend says.

Standing at her front door and looking past her trim, tanned freckled body, clad in a blue, vertical-white-stripe jumper and with white thong sandals, you see a black-and-white tile floor and to the left beautiful white - carpeted formal living room.

"Are you nervous?" "Not yet," she says, and adds, crinkling: "I like splashdown best.

"This must be a trying time, right now."

"Isn't it always?" "Just a way of life?"

"Yeah," with a pleasant but resigned smile, "pretty

One day somebody missed the trampoline and broke a vertebra. Alan Shepard, then chief of the Astronaut office, said that's all — no more using the trampoline. Next day, Mike went to the hospital and got a leg cast, a half one that showed only in front, and went to Shepard.

"Well, Al," he began, "it's about that physical training

"Well, I guess man's greatest fear is the fear of the unknown," he said, "and I think that's true about this flight. My greatest fear is that there's some detail that has been left uncovered, that I have failed to learn how to do something properly. Sor situation may arise which I'll not be able to give the proper response to.

"If I knew what it was, I'd run out and study it and it exist anymore, you see. All chains have some weak link in them and when you start pulling on a chain you don't know which one it is. You just have to wait and

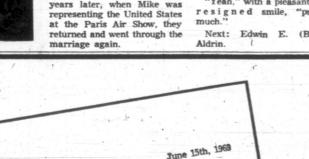

How will he feel about acclaim after the flight?

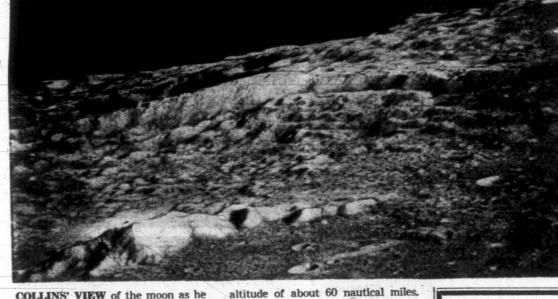

"I've really enjoyed this program immensely. The job is the most fascinating in the world. On the other hand, I say in all candor that I appreciate remaining anonymous, and I'll do the best T can to keep that going. I like to live a normal, private life, and my intent is to take whatever action is necessary to insure that I can continue to do that ... I truly enjoy my family. I get a big kick out of staying home with my wife and kids."

Collins, museular but scrawny enough to be called "scarecrow" as a boy, browned-eyed and with receding hair, now is 5 feet 11 and 165 pounds. He was the third American to leave a spacecraft in flight (Gemini 10) but he had bailed out once from a flaming jet.

Not Pretentious

That was over his air force base in Chambley, France, where he had met Patricia Mary Finnegan of Boston, a base recreation director, green-eyed, with shortcut raven black hair. They were married there in 1957. Ten years later, when Mike was returned and went through
